DOCTOR

I believe that the most important personality trait a doctor should have is responsibility. Doctors work with the most valuable asset, our health, and consequences of a rash decision could be very serious and ~~they~~ could even lead to the death of a patient in the worst case. This is the reason why doctors should be responsible and eliminate the potential risk of a patient coming to harm.

/ fearful / adj

Another beneficial characteristic for a doctor which I have chosen is kindness. People who must visit a doctor usually have some troubles and they are often nervous and ~~have~~ fear. I think that it is always an advantage if a doctor has the ability to calm the patient down and to explain ~~him~~ all aspects of some potential illness kindly.

* explain sth to S.O. / never explain S.O. / but have the S.O. is unnecessary!

The Last beneficial trait which a doctor could make use of and which I will mention is open-mindedness. The reason is that there are still new advances in a lot of areas all the time, medical science included, and it could be very beneficial for a doctor to adapt to new methods and techniques which could be more effective than the former ones and which could widen his horizons.

nice!

On the other hand, I believe that it is detrimental for a doctor to be irresolute. Doctors have to make quick and important decisions and usually it is not possible to take them back. Moreover, being unable to decide quickly or being unsure ~~with the already~~ about made previously decisions is not really comforting for the patient.

"The already made dec..." doesn't work. Better is: "previously made..."

I also believe that a doctor should not be timid. He is in contact with ~~the~~ patients all the time and the inability to communicate with them properly could limit him in work. Unfortunately, sometimes he even needs to tell the patient some bad news regarding his health and in my opinion it is beneficial if he has good communication skills.

Nicely done... good adj. / good explanations..
See comments above,

Thanks, P.
