

of positioning as “the part of the brand identity and value proposition that is to be actively committed to the target audience and that demonstrates an advantage over competing brands.” Philip Kotler refers to it as the unique selling proposition. In other words, the positioning statement is the point where the bundles of attributes join to form one concept that aims at capturing the essence of what the target tourists seek in the tour package offered. These two concepts (differentiation and positioning) will be dealt with in greater detail in the next chapter.

PROMINENT GENRES IN INDIAN TOURISM

The segmentation techniques and variables discussed help categorize contemporary Indian tourism into a host of genres listed in the following table. The segmentation variables (geographic, demographic, psychographic and behavioural) along with a couple of special bases become the guiding tools for classification of the tourism industry into genres that have an identity of their own. Each of the following genres has a uniqueness of its own and follows the basic rules of segmentation – measurable, substantial, accessible, differentiable and actionable.

Case Study: Mcleodgani and Triund — An Exciting Experience as a Tour

In May 2006, we, a group of seven people planned to make a memorable trekking trip. The first choice that came to my mind was Triund because I had been there before as well. It is 9 km uphill Mcleodgani in Himachal Pradesh. Mcleodgani itself is around 10 km from Dharamshala. Mcleodgani, also known as Upper Dharamshala, was so named in the 19th century after David McLeod, the lieutenant governor of Punjab at that time. During the British rule in India, the town was a hill station where the Britishers spent the hot summers. It is very famous for Tsuglag-Khang or Tsuglag Khang, the Dalai Lama's temple. It has statues of Shakyamuni and Avalokitesvara, and

We reached Mcleodgani on a Saturday afternoon after a tiring journey that started on Friday night left from Delhi in a train to Patnankot, from where we took the state roadways bus to Mcleodgani via Dharamshala. We were there by 2 p.m. In the afternoon, when we decided to take some rest, we toured the monastery on the same day, after which we headed for a famous waterfall. We reached there after a small but arduous trek of around 30 minutes. When we reached the foot of the waterfall, it was dusk and getting darker. So, most of the people had left. The most amazing part there was that there was a tea stall that served us hot tea w
