

M: Hi Šárka! How are you?

Š: Hi Markéta! How are you? What are you doing? You look upset.

M: I'm writing a cover letter. I'm going to apply for a new job.

Š: Really? Why? Would you like to take some rest from teaching?

M: You know that I enjoy teaching English. I really like working with students. But I simply can't stand communicating with one of my colleagues. I need to change the department. At least.

Š: I see.

M: And, you know, I remember so many times when I was teaching online ...that ... and explaining something, you know, to the students he called me and asked me to do something for him and... some paper immediately and I feel he's been treating me more like his assistant than his colleague! And, you know, he even gave me emails to write, and I just can't take this any more and I hate that.

Š: Oh, I see. That's ridiculous!

M: Yes, and that's not all, you know! Last Monday I stayed late in the office, and I was writing a report from 4 pm to 8 pm! And he was supposed to help me and he didn't, you know. And nobody's going to pay me for this.

Š: Yeah, yeah. I'm sorry to hear that. So, what are you going to do? Are you going to tell him that you want to quit the job?

M: Well, probably yes. Maybe, he can change, you know. So I'm meeting him on Thursday at 10 o'clock. I want to tell him the truth. I want to tell him everything and maybe, then he can change.

Š: Wow, that's good. Good luck!

M: Thank you.
