

English B1. E-Learning – Video – Week 5 – Unit 6 – Personality Test

M: Hi Šárka! How are you?

Š: Hi Markéta! How are you?

M: I'm fine, thanks. And what are you doing? Are you reading some news?

Š: No, no, I'm not. I'm taking a personality test.

M: A personality test?

Š: Yeah, I want to learn something about my character.

M: Wow! Have you got the results yet?

Š: Yeah, yeah, yeah. I'm the so-called campaigner, the ENFP personality type.

M: ENFP? What does that mean? What do the letters stand for?

Š: Wait, let me read it here. It describes people with extraverted, feeling... sorry, sorry, extraverted, intuitive, feeling, and prospecting personality traits. That's what they write here.

M: Wow. And what does that mean extroverts?

Š: I mean. Let me read ... read it to you. So...

Extraverted individuals prefer group activities and they get energized from social interaction. They tend to be more enthusiastic and easily excited than or more easily excited than introverts.

M: Wow. And all politicians must be extroverts then. 'Cause they like to socialize, you know, they meet new people on the daily basis, actually. And they also ... must be confident, I think, so they might be extroverts.

Š: Yeah, yeah, but actually some of them are more sociable and enjoy collaborating with other people and the others are more shy. I've heard that Barack Obama, you know, one of the US presidents was an introvert.

M: Really?

Š: Hmm.

M: Well, I only noticed he wrote with ... his left hand. And they say that left-handed people ... are more creative and communicative and that ...

Š: Yeah, I've heard that they are involved in the arts very often.

M: Yes, yes.

Š: Yes. But do you believe it?

M: I don't know.

Š: Because it seems to me that some more recent research in psychology says that these characteristics are not always true about left-handed people.

M: That can be right, you know, because actually I read it last week and the book was from the 1990s so probably the information...

Š: Yeah, that's quite old.

M: Definitely, definitely.

Š: And how about you? Do you think that you are an extrovert?

M: Maybe. I don't know.

Š: You know, extroverts tend to be more adventurous than introverts. Have you ever done anything crazy or adventurous in your life? But, be honest!

M: Yes, actually, yes. You know, you remember, when I was on the trip in Australia, I dived with the great white sharks in the cage. A lot of adventure there.

Š: Really!

M: Yes.

Š: That's cool. But that's a bit crazy, I would say.

M: Yeah, because I enjoyed that, really.

Š: Wow, wow. So why don't you take the personality test, too?

M: Good idea, I might do that.

Š: Yeah, it's exciting.

M: Good, good.

Š: Let's do it.

M: Yeah, I will, I will.