

1) Not even the highly skilled portraitist invited from France could make the queen a flattering portrait. The detective was still not entirely convinced after the statement of the witness and with suspicion went to the crime scene to investigate again and more thoroughly.

A Considerable number of people were infected with the virus worldwide.

The early reports of the damage caused by the earthquake were wildly exaggerated.

Enormous quantities of protective face masks are being produced all over the world.

2) alternative, cautious, collapsible, detestable, honourable, laborious, loathsome, hypocritical, philosophical, repulsive, tenacious, theatrical, virtuous, voluntary

3) It is a highly philosophical question whether there was any more obvious sentence with this word.

Brute force did not bring any success this ^{time} some, so we had to use an alternative approach.

Laborious work on the house of cards was wasted with a single blow of the wind.

He offered his voluntary help, he did not seek any profit in the that.

Please be cautious when walking around not to step on anyone's leg.

(better would be: "He volunteered his help, out of course you lose the card") definite article... specific

Good work.

Thanks!