

1. Making sentences from collocations

- On the third day of our mountain hike Jake finally admitted that we were completely lost.
- The players were utterly devastated after losing in the final of the 2019 ice hockey world cup.
- The recipe for making Cola remains a closely guarded secret.
- I went out for a walk this afternoon and it was absolutely boiling. (nice)
- The movie we went to see in the local cinema yesterday was deadly boring.

2. Exercise 7

- Alternate – alternate
- I was thinking of an alternative method of using that formula.
- Caution – cautious
- Choosing a cautious approach to studying this matter is a wise decision.
- Collapse – collapsible
- The number of collapsible scooters on the streets of Prague has increased.
- Detest – detestable
- The results of my final exams were detestable. (in the sense of despicable and evil)
- Honour – honourable
- My grandfather was an honourable man.
- Labour – laborious
- The laborious task of correcting our answer sheets has begun.
- Loathe – loathsome
- Coronavirus is a loathsome disease. (nice!)
- Hypocrisy – hypocritical
- Andrey Babiš is being hypocritical when accusing others that they are corrupt. of being
- Philosophy – philosophical
- Yesterday, I started writing my philosophical essay.
- Repel – repulsive
- I hate dill, it is so repulsive!
- Tenacity – tenacious
- My bachelor's work focuses on tenacious liquids.
- Theatre – theatrical
- We thought his behaviour was quite theatrical.
- Virtue – virtuous
- Nuns are virtuous people with high moral standards.
- Volunteer – voluntary
- Many people took voluntary action by sewing cotton masks.

better:
accuse s.o. of doing

nice work!
thanks!

This is new for me. I looked it up + couldn't find it used as a lead or collocation,
but I might be wrong