

am (singular nouns) Ad hominem argument refers to a fallacy, where one tries to avoid discussion by attacking and undermining the credibility of the opponent's argument.

The recent statement from prime minister regarding the current pandemic crisis caused a severe backlash from small business owners.

Since his car accident, he suffers from chronic pain in his left knee.

Due to the overwhelming success of the local music festival, it is to become a recurring event.

often we use "recur"
to show sthng that repeats itself

By speeding, not only do you run the risk of getting a large fine, but also hazard with yours and other people's lives.

dreams recur
illnesses recur
problems recur
tragedies recur

often with a
neg. implication.

, but not a show,
or celebration
or event that is consciously repeated by human effort.

Well-done
- Good use of vocabulary -
- points of article well expressed ...
you mixed up categories
, but I suspect this was an inadvertent mistake

Thanks, / -

David
next time
one sheet of paper
is sufficient.

The opposite

PRO:

con

- risk of undermining goals of antismoke movement ✓
- no evidence that exposure to smoke outside causes substantial damage ✓
- conflating negative effects of short-term and repeating exposure ✓
- smoke-filled areas ✓
- lose scientific credibility ✓
- ban is from public-health perspective pointless ✓
- focus on extending workplace protections ✓

CON:

pro

- increased risk of respiratory and heart disease ✓
- levels of tobacco near smokers outside comparable to indoors ✓
- even transient exposure can cause severe health effects (cardiovascular, cancer) ✓
- ban may provide symbolic victory ✓