

Baker Description:

Morrisonville was a poor place to prepare for a struggle with the twentieth century, but a delightful place to spend a childhood. It was summer days drenched with sunlight, fields yellow with buttercups, and barn lofts sweet with hay. Clusters of purple grapes dangled from backyard arbors, lavender wisteria blossoms perfumed the air from the great vine enclosing the end of my grandmother's porch, and wild roses covered the fences.

On a broiling afternoon when all the men were away at work and all the women napped, I moved through majestic depths of silences, silences so immense I could hear the corn growing. Under these silences there was an orchestra of natural music playing notes no city child would ever hear. A certain cackle from the henhouse meant we had gained an egg. The creak of a porch swing told of a momentary breeze blowing across my grandmother's yard. Moving past Liz Virt's barn as quietly as an indian, I could hear the swish of a horse's tail and knew the horseflies were out in strength. As I tiptoed along a mossy bank to surprise a frog, a faint splash told me the quarry had spotted me and slipped into the stream. Wandering among the sleeping houses, I learned that tin roofs crackle under the power of the sun, and when I tired and came back to my grandmother's house, I padded into her dark cool living room, lay flat on the floor, and listened to the hypnotic beat of her pendulum clock on the wall ticking the meaningless hours away.

Paragraph #1,2

Sight, smell, hearing, touch

/ you present sth to s. one / but away "describe" is a better choice —

My description

The place, I am going to ^{describe} ~~present~~ you, is one of kind. It is a combination of solitude, silence and raw nature which cannot be found anywhere else. Some ^{may} ask if it has a name? No, It does not. This site is unforgettable especially during spring, summer and early autumn. Its ^{filled} ~~live~~ with blooming flowers, countless number of insects such as bees and ants ^{and} with singing birds. The glade is surrounded by forest with all kinds of living creatures. In the middle of the plain is a rock with a few trees sitting on it. The forest is calmly fizzing and from time to time You can hear a owl. Best ever time is when the sky is clear with ^{an} occasional fly-by of buzzard looking for a prey. If you are lucky You can spot a small herd of deers leisurely grazing. Once a year majestic buck shows up ^{with} ~~up~~ huge horns. The forest is gloomy with sandstone rocks over 10 meters high. Right under the rocks there is a little stream which creates comforting environment to forget about everything.

^{The} Surface of the rocks is similar to sugar cubes but a bit rougher. There are holes in the cliffs. ^{Dimensions} of the holes differ from each other. It ^{urges} ~~urges~~ to imagine what have been there a long time ago. Vivid blue sea with prehistoric creatures.

Better is " .. an occasional buzzard flying by ~~and~~ looking for prey " fizz - doesn't work...

drinks fizz, but not forests —

Good details, but see comments above

1) The sound of a tap dripping kept me awake all night.

2) The rain is really pelting down. We can not possibly go out in it.

3) There was a loud gush sound as the bathwater ran down the plughole.

4) Be careful how you pour my beer.

5) There was a splash as my camera fell into the river.

6) As I lay in my cabin I heard the gentle sound of waves gurgling against the hull.

7) The River Swift rises in the hills and then flows south west to the sea.

8) A water main had burst and water was gushing out of the ground with great force.

9) Moisture from the fish had trickled through the paper bag and made the rest of the shopping damp.

10) Rain was falling on my collar and seeped unpleasantly down my neck.

trickle / to flow in a thin stream.

gurgling / the sound of water going through a small aperture (drain)
